

POLICE SERGEANT

JOB DESCRIPTION

Classification Responsibilities: A Police Sergeant performs first-line supervision of the activities of sworn and/or non-sworn personnel on a shift who are engaged in patrol duty, Community Action Team, Bike Patrol, Special Weapons and Tactics Team (SWAT), K-9, Air Unit, traffic regulatory activities, criminal investigations, community relations, crime prevention activities, internal investigations, in-service training activities, and special services including animal control. An employee may be placed on special assignment as the department's Public Information Officer. In addition, a Police Sergeant monitors and maintains security of assigned patrol district facility in accordance to Homeland Security and City policies. A Police Sergeant frequently participates in the work performed by subordinate officers, and may become involved in situations requiring extreme physical exertion. This class is responsible for performing related duties as required.

Distinguishing Features: Specific work instructions are received from superior officers on new assignments, but a Police Sergeant works independently in performing regularly assigned duties and assumes complete charge in the event of the absence of a superior officer. Work is performed in accordance with federal, state, and local laws as well as departmental policies, procedures, and general orders. Work is reviewed by inspection, through verbal and written reports, and by results achieved. A Police Sergeant may be subject to rotating shifts depending on assignment. This class is FLSA nonexempt.
